Coming Home I raced down the gravel road to my parents' house, leaving a huge plume of white dust in the air behind me as I rounded the curve to the house. As I pulled into the driveway, I was filled with a bit of panic, so I turned off my car and just sat there for a moment, not wanting to face the eyes of scrutiny that awaited me inside.

As youngsters, my sister (then known as Tina) and I would often go fishing at the weekend with our step-father Harry and step-brother Pete. On match days we'd sit and watch them fish but if it was a family outing, Mum would come along to keep an eye on us and we'd be allowed to cast our own lines and try to catch a few fish ourselves.
