We were lost in the middle of Timbuktu. No one knew where we were. Next time we travel, we're going to bring along a map. "[F]rom the spiral stairs that led down from the southwest tower came the shuffling of slow, padded feet. The magicians were coming! Low and slow, they were chanting words that were strange." (Dr. Seuss, The 500 Hats of Bartholomew Cubbins).

Here is what happened when I asked twenty-seven thousand people "What is page for page the book with the most wisdom you've ever read?". My thinking was, and still is, that you need to filter what you read. Reading, I mean really reading, is not simple. It's time consuming. So aside from finding time and remembering what you read, you want to make sure you're reading the right things.
