I have read Each Little Bird That Sings twenty-seven times. One summer, I read it three times in one week. In seventh grade I could recite the first five pages from memory. Though slightly childish, Each Little Bird That Sings remains, to this day, my favourite book. Deborah Wiles created characters I considered some of my best friends.

Outside every window, each little bird sings a song, each little bird tells a story. Each little bird — that's us. It has been my privilege to hear these stories on the road, to feel that spark of recognition, of resonance, in each of them. It has been my delight to go on the road with family — you. Thank you for coming along with me.
