Drawing Conclusions Commissario Brunetti 20

I love Venice and one of the reasons I loved Donna Leon's latest book, Drawing Conclusions, is because it is set in Venice. The famous Commissario Guido Brunetti return again to investigate the apparent heart attack of an older woman. The other reason I loved Leon's novel is because it perfectly captures the imperfections of the human condition.

Commissario Guido Brunetti must contend with ingenious corruption, bureaucratic intransigence, and the stifling heat of a Venetian summer. As he plans a trip to the mountains with his family, he learns that cases at the local court - hardly known as a model of efficiency - are being delayed to the benefit of one of the parties.
