I've fallen in love with Corduroy. Just like Lisa, the little girl in Don Freeman's children's book, who buys Corduroy from the toy department with her piggy bank savings. Corduroy sadly believes that his missing button is why he's still on the shelf instead of at home with the little girl so he goes on a search to find his button.

"Corduroy" was a pet name that my father had for me when I was very young because I used to wear corduroy overalls all the time. But all this is not the story about Corduroy the toy bear who went to find his lost button in a department store. Don never said much about a story when he was working on it.
