1. Introduction. School education in the twenty-first century is expected to equip students with both domain knowledge and the twenty-first century skills in order to meet the requirements of a vigorously changing society (Chan, 2010, Gut, 2011). Information literacy and critical thinking skills are two important parts of the twenty-first century skills (Gut, 2011, Kang et al., 2010).

The social, communicative practice of argumentation can and should be distinguished from implication (or entailment)—a relationship between propositions; and from inference—a mental activity typically thought of as the drawing of a conclusion from premises. Informal logic may thus be said to be a logic of argumentation, as distinguished from implication and inference.
